BEAR LOOSE.-The circus gave a little street parade yesterday that was not down on the program. The bears were taken from their cages and chained to stakes while the artists were painting and decorating their homes, An old black bear got a scent of blood that had been strewn around by the meat commississary, broke his chain and went on the warpath. Seizing a cinnamon cub he crushed him to death on the spot. Then heading a procession of showmen armed with clubs and ropes, which crowd was augmented by all observers, he headed toward the state prison. Bruin would dash at his tantalizing pursuers but some one would pelt him a blow with a club from behind who in turn would be chased till another would divert the irate bear's mind with a blow. This was kept up till he was brought to bay in Mr. Patterson's barn on State street where bruin was lassoed and returned to his narrow house.

THE GAME LAW .- There has been a very mad Polk county farmer in town several times looking for a pair of prominent Salem sporting men, who he owns. His trout rod yielded him a entered his enclosed land to kill China nice return. pheasants and grouse. He proposes to enforce the new game law on them which forbids anyone entering the enclosed lands of another or shooting on the highway or from the highway without permission. There is a rumor obat the legislature may be called to deal with the financial stringency about Oct. 1st., If better times do not set in.

Good SCHOOL.-The people near Bodaville are looking forward to a successful year for Mineral Springs seminary. The president has not yet been selected, but negotiations are pending. The institution is owned by the Oregon synod of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, and is under the control of that body. The trustees are energetic men and mean push.—Albany Herald.

THE BATTLE OF GLADSTONE.

Concluding Events of the State Encampment at Camp Compson.

Baturday was a gala day at Glad-National Guard. It was the conclusion of a week's fetes, drills, maneuvers and discipline in tactics. In 150 army tents bivousced some 500 men and officers of Oregon's 1400 enlisted militia men. All the details of an army in camp were here to be witnessed every stars and stripes drop from on high to the discharge of the sunset gun. No one could witness the exercises of a day, concluding with review, manual, exercises and inspection by brigade officers without having created in him | gin on several state buildings. Today a feeling of pride over the state militia. the State Board of Education decided THE SHAM BATTLE,

Saturday, at 3 p. m. was witnessed by thousands of people. General Compson planned the entire action. It was in the nature of an attack on the camp, led by Major Sherman in command of the Second Regiment companies from Salem, an arduous position, for many of his men were raw recruits, but all conducted themselves well. The objective point of the enemy was to raid the railroad that furnished the camp with supplies. There was an open field between the track and the wooded height beyond where the battery opened the action with shot and shell upon Camp Compson a half mile away in an open field on the Clackamas river. The infantry held the railroad, where they were firmly intrenched. Major Snerman had Capt. Greenleaf in command of battery A, and also had the engineer corps of the brigade. We have not space to give the details of the hour's fighting, the disposition of the several small armies, the stragetic moves, attacks and repulses of an

It was as realistic a repro-duction of a battle scene as we have ever witnessed. Several hundred acres were covered with men fighting, artillery and musketry filling the air with smoke, staff officers with orders dashing across the plain, hospital corps bearing off the wounded, (unfortunately one actually and fatally hurt,) The attack upon the camp was ably resisted throughout by the First Regiment under Major Everett who displayed great

After a hard duty all day over a dusty parade grounds the companies all came on for inspection with clean bright faces and uniforms as free from dust as on a Sunday morning parade.
